INTRODUCTION

Data collection is a key aspect of the overall international protection function of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). As stipulated in UNHCR's mandate: "The High Commissioner shall provide for the protection of refugees falling under the competence of his Office by: ... (f) Obtaining from Governments information concerning the number and conditions of refugees in their territories..." (emphasis added). Since 1994, UNHCR has issued the Statistical Overview on an annual basis, providing key data, trends and indicators on refugees and other groups of concern to UNHCR worldwide.

In recent years, UNHCR's involvement with persons who are not refugees, including internally displaced persons and persons who have returned home ("returnees") has increased. In view of this, and taking into consideration the various legal distinctions in certain countries ("asylum-seekers", "humanitarian status", temporary protection", "provisional admission", etc.), the term "refugees and others of concern to UNHCR" has been adopted in this document to reflect the various categories of persons with whom UNHCR is concerned. Palestinian refugees who come under the mandate of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) are, however, not included in this report.

For the purpose of data collection, the population of concern to UNHCR has been defined as follows:

- ❑ Refugees. Persons recognized as refugees under the 1951 United Nations Convention relating to the Status of Refugees or its 1967 Protocol, the 1969 Organization of African Unity (OAU) Convention Governing the Specific Aspects of Refugee Problems in Africa, persons recognized as refugees in accordance with the UNHCR Statute, persons granted humanitarian or comparable status and those granted temporary protection.
- ❑ Returned refugees or "returnees". Refugees who have repatriated to their place of origin and who remain of concern to UNHCR for a limited period after their return. For the purpose of these statistics, a cut-off period of two years has been applied. Thus, the returnee population at the end of 1999 consists of those who returned during 1998 and 1999.
- ❑ Asylum-seekers. Persons whose applications for asylum are pending in the asylum procedure or who are otherwise registered as asylum-seekers.
- ❑ Others of concern. Certain specific groups of persons not normally falling under the mandate of UNHCR, but to whom the Office extends protection and/or assistance pursuant to a special request by a competent organ of the United Nations. This category comprises selected internally displaced populations, groups of war victims, certain groups which emerged following the dissolution of the Soviet Union, etc. As in the case of returned refugees, a cut-off period of two years has been applied for returned IDPs. Thus, the returned IDP population at the end of 1999 consists of IDPs who returned to their place of origin during 1998 and 1999.

Statistics pertaining to the former Soviet Union have been classified under Russian Federation, data pertaining to the former Czechoslovakia have been classified under Czech Republic and data pertaining to the former Yugoslavia have been classified under the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia has been abbreviated to FYR Macedonia. The Special Administrative Region of Hong Kong, China is referred to as

Hong Kong, China (SAR). In country names, the word "Democratic" has been shortened to "Dem.", whereas "Republic" has been replaced by "Rep."

The regional classification adopted is that of the Population Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat.

All figures in this report have been rounded. Consequently, totals may not always add up. In most tables, a dash ("-") indicates that the value is zero, rounded to zero, not available or not applicable.

A. DATA SOURCES

The data presented here have been collected through UNHCR's annual statistical survey of UNHCR country offices. Statistics on the industrialized countries are generally based directly on Government reports, whereas the figures for developing countries are mostly based on reports from UNHCR offices.

In the majority of countries, there is more than one source for statistics, complicating the compilation of statistics at the national level. Thus, in countries where assistance is provided, different sources may exist, with varying degrees of quality, for the number of refugees living in camps, in urban areas, among local populations and who are not assisted by UNHCR. Likewise, the entity that is de facto responsible for refugee registration, and thus the source of statistical information, varies between and within countries. This may be the Government, UNHCR, NGOs or a combination of these. In more developed countries, spontaneously arriving asylum-seekers and resettled refugees are often recorded by different agencies and at different points in time.

B. DATA COVERAGE

While every effort has been made to make these statistics as comprehensive as possible, there are populations and movements that are not known to UNHCR because the Office is not directly involved, government records are lacking, etc. For instance, in most repatriation operations, UNHCR has a presence on both sides of the border. Nevertheless, the total number of refugee returns may be difficult to establish in situations where refugees return by their own means and do not notify the national authorities or UNHCR in the country of departure or return.

Industrialized countries often lack a refugee register. As a result, the size of the refugee population as well as its increases and, in particular, decreases is often difficult to establish.

C. DATA QUALITY

The quality of the data presented differs significantly between and within countries. Factors determining the data quality include the type of population (asylum-seekers, refugees, IDPs, etc.), the registration capacity of the host country and the provision of international assistance. Generally speaking, returnees and internally displaced populations are not registered, whereas assistance programmes for these groups are limited. Consequently, the statistical information on the size and composition of these populations is generally not very precise and estimates may fluctuate markedly from one year to the next. Considering the various sources and the many different types of information presented, it is not possible to provide an overall assessment of data quality at the country level.

Some statistical information, such as demographic characteristics, may be based on extrapolations resulting from health surveys or visual assessments. In general, however, assisting refugees on a regular basis requires registration at the individual or family level. Beneficiary statistics linked to entitlements are subject to close scrutiny, because they form the basis for assistance programmes (see Section D. below).

The lack of a refugee register in most of the industrialized countries clearly affects the quality of refugee data in these countries. However, asylum-seeker data are very detailed and offer a significant potential for analysis (see Section E below).

D. MANAGING POPULATION STATISTICS IN UNHCR-OPERATIONS

Accurate statistics are key to protecting and assisting refugees, and to plan and implement durable solutions. Since the creation of the Office and as part of its overall activities, UNHCR has assisted governments in counting, registering, verifying and estimating displaced populations. Censuses, or registrations, as they are commonly referred to, are undertaken periodically in all field operations where refugees are provided with assistance. Beneficiary numbers are regularly evaluated and adapted to reflect changes in the actual population (arrivals, births, deaths, repatriations, etc.).

There is a strong correlation between UNHCR's population statistics and its assistance programmes. Indeed, one of the major reasons for the Office to collect, compile and report statistics is to indicate the size and major characteristics of populations who benefit from international assistance programmes ("beneficiaries"). Often, the assistance is provided through governmental, intergovernmental or non-governmental "implementing partners".

Assistance is provided to those who cannot meet their own basic needs, that is, when adequate resources are not available. In this report, the term "UNHCR-assisted" is used to reflect the beneficiaries of UNHCR's various assistance activities.

UNHCR provides five types of assistance:

- Emergency assistance. This includes measures to meet basic needs, usually in case of a new refugee influx, and does not normally exceed a period of twelve months;
  - Care and maintenance. This covers assistance once survival is no longer threatened. It involves meeting basic needs on a more routine basis, pending the identification of durable solutions (voluntary repatriation, local settlement or resettlement). Assistance usually takes the form of providing food, water, household utensils, medical care, shelter, transportation, basic education, vocational training, etc.;
  - Voluntary repatriation. This covers preparations for departure to the country of origin, transportation, etc. In most cases, it also involves activities in the country of origin, including organizing reception facilities and assistance during the initial phase of reintegration;
  - Local settlement. This form of assistance may be provided to refugees who cannot return home. It aims to promote their self-sufficiency and local integration;
  - Resettlement. This may be offered to refugees who are admitted temporarily to a country of asylum, who cannot return to their home country and who face particular protection problems. UNHCR facilitates permanent settlement in third countries through securing resettlement places, medical screening, arranging for travel and measures to facilitate the integration of the refugee in the country of resettlement. UNHCR facilitated resettlement departures are included in Chapter III, whereas Chapter V provides data on resettlement arrivals as reported by governments.

E. STATISTICS PRODUCED BY INDUSTRIALIZED COUNTRIES

One of main challenges in compiling global refugee statistics is to collect comparable refugee data from developing countries, where assistance programmes are mounted by the international community, and from industrialized countries, which mainly focus on individual refugee status determination. The available data on developing countries concerns largely prima facie refugees who arrived as part of a mass inflow and who are located in camps. In the industrialized world, however, governments are mostly concerned with the spontaneous arrival of individual asylum-seekers and the adjudication of their claims.

Few industrialized countries maintain a register from which the total refugee population and its main changes can be derived. Even in countries which maintain a refugee register, its quality is generally poor due to difficulties in updating, lack of coverage, etc. In short, most countries are not able to provide an answer to the question "how many refugees are living in the country?". Similarly, information on basic characteristics of the refugee population (nationality, sex, age, etc.) is not available. Apart from data on the recognition of asylum-seekers or the arrival of refugees, information on changes in the refugee population are unavailable, particularly concerning decreases (departures, deaths, naturalization, etc.).

In the absence of accurate refugee population data in industrialized countries, UNHCR utilizes a simple methodology to estimate the number of refugees by adding up the total number of recognized asylum-seekers and resettled refugees over the past few years. The refugee estimate for industrialized countries includes persons granted long-term residence status, whether they arrived spontaneously as asylum-seekers or in an organized fashion through government resettlement programmes. For the countries of permanent settlement, the refugee estimate is based on the arrivals/recognition during the past five years, whereas the estimate for other countries is based on a 10-year period (see also Table I.2). These time periods reflect the different speed of naturalization in these two groups of countries. Given the lack of official refugee population data in these countries, the above method provides a basic but verifiable estimate for the national refugee population.

While there is little reliable information on refugee populations, industrialized countries produce a significant amount of data on individual asylum processing. Arguably, the annual asylum data offer the best prospect for a realistic international comparison of industrialized countries. This Overview, therefore, contains several tables on this issue (Chapter V and VI).

CHAPTER II.

REFUGEE POPULATION AND MAJOR CHANGES

COUNTRY NOTES

The purpose of these notes is to explain the changes in the refugee population from the end of 1998 as reported in the 1999 Statistical Overview to the end of 1999, which are not explained in Table II.1 under Increases or Decreases.

Argentina. The change in the refugee population as reported in the 1998 Statistical Overview and at the beginning of 1999 is due to a subsequent verification of records (-8,600).

Armenia. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by the naturalization of 6,300 refugees.

Austria. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by the resettlement and repatriation of refugees from Bosnia and Herzegovina as well as a change in their residence status.

Belgium. The difference between the current estimate and the estimate reported previously is due to a review of records, resulting in a lower estimate (-18,000).

Bangladesh. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by births (+1,200).

Canada. The difference between the current estimate and the estimate reported previously is due to the fact that the current figure no longer includes humanitarian "landings" since 1997. This is because recent arrivals under this category are generally not refugees. As explained in the Introduction, the refugee population in Canada, as well as in a number of other industrialized countries, is estimated by UNHCR on the basis of the number of persons granted refugee status as well as resettled refugees during the past five years.

Congo. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by a recently undertaken census among Rwandan refugees (+2,000).

Democratic Republic of the Congo. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by increased access to some areas for UNHCR and resulting higher estimates for Sudanese (39,600); Rwandan (26,500), Angolan (2,000) and Ugandan refugees (1,200).

Gambia. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by spontaneous departures of refugees from Guinea-Bissau (-1,100).

Guinea. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by the inclusion of some 67,500 Liberian refugees.

India. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by deaths and spontaneous departures (-10,000).

Côte d'Ivoire. The difference between the current estimate and the estimate reported previously is due to a revised estimate for Liberian refugees (+31,000).

Indonesia. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by the inclusion of some 10,000 East Timorese who were in Indonesia prior to the crisis of August 1999.

Iraq. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by an increase in the estimate of the number of Palestinian refugees (27,000) and a decrease in the number of Iranian refugees due to spontaneous departures (1,900).

Italy. The difference between the current estimate and the estimate reported previously is partly due to a lower official estimate of refugees from former Yugoslavia. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by the arrival of refugees from Kosovo admitted under the Humanitarian Evacuation Programme (+5,800) and the non-renewal of humanitarian permits or their conversion into residence permits (-9,400).

Kenya. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by the updating of records and births (+4,600), by the exclusion of urban dwellers, which were included in previous reporting (41,500 Somalis) and by spontaneous departures (5,800 Rwandans).

Liberia. The difference between the current estimate and the estimate reported previously is the result of a review of records (-6,800).

Mauritania. The difference between the end-1998 refugee population as reported in the Statistical Overview 1998 and the begin-1999 figure is due to reclassification. Some 23,100 persons from Western Sahara previously reported as refugees have now been reported as others of concern to UNHCR (see Table I.8).

FYR Macedonia. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by the evacuation of refugees from Kosovo through the Humanitarian Evacuation Programme.

Mali. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by the spontaneous departure of Mauretanian refugees and a readjustment of the estimate (-5,500).

Nepal. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by newly registered births and deaths (+4,900).

Norway. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by arrivals of refugees from Kosovo through the Humanitarian Evacuation Programme (8,060).

Senegal. The decrease is due to a revised estimate of Mauretanian refugees (-35,100).

Sierra Leone. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by the spontaneous departure of Liberian refugees (2,200).

Slovenia. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by the arrival of refugees from Kosovo through the Humanitarian Evacuation Programme (1,600) as well as by the reclassification of Kosovars from others of concern to UNHCR to refugees (2,000).

Syrian Arab Republic. The increase and decrease is due to a review of records resulting in an increase of mainly Somali refugees and a decrease of mainly Iraqi refugees.

United Republic of Tanzania. The population increase during 1999 is explained in part by refugees being transferred to camps by the national authorities (8,200 Burundians, 3,200 Congolese) and by natural causes (approximately 15,000). The decrease is mainly due to a verification resulting in a decrease in the number of refugees from Burundi (48,200), the Democratic Republic of the Congo (38,900) and others (3,500).

Turkmenistan. The population increase during 1999 is explained in part by an increased estimate of 5,800 Tajik refugees.

Turkey. The population increase during 1999 is explained in part by the arrival of refugees from Kosovo through the Humanitarian Evacuation Programme as well as by other arrivals (10,300).

Ukraine. The population decrease during 1999 is explained in part by spontaneous departures and refugees who have not renewed their refugee status (4,100).

Yemen. The population decrease during 1999 is explained in part by a revalidation of refugee cards (9,700). There are an additional 22,000 urban Somali refugees who require documentation.

Zambia. The population change during 1999 is explained in part by spontaneous departures (-1,300).

Notes

* Due to the general unavailability of accurate refugee population data, industrialized countries are not included in this Table (see also Chapter VI).

A 'dash' (-) indicates that the value is zero, rounded to zero or not available. Thus, gaps in the time series may be due to the lack of available data, rather than reflecting actual refugee movements.

Notes

* All figures are rounded to the nearest ten. Therefore, totals may not add up.
 Note, however, that the last three last columns of this table have been calculated on the basis of the unrounded figures.
 See Table IV.1. for an explanation of the column headings.

Notes

* All figures are rounded to the nearest ten. Therefore, totals may not add up.

Note, however, that the last three last columns of this table have been calculated on the basis of the unrounded figures.

See Table IV.1. for an explanation of the column headings and for notes.

See Chapter V for general and country-specific notes on asylum statistics in industrialized countries.

CHAPTER V.

ASYLUM APPLICATIONS, REFUGEE STATUS DETERMINATION AND RESETTLEMENT IN SELECTED COUNTRIES, 1980-1999

SOME CONSIDERATIONS CONCERNING ASYLUM DATA

This Chapter provides information on asylum applications, status determination and refugee resettlement for the period 1980 to 1999 in 33 industrialized countries. The data were reported by governments to UNHCR over the past two decades. The countries and years in which UNHCR carried out status determination under its mandate are indicated in the footnotes to the tables.

Information currently available on certain countries or categories may not be available for the earlier years. The tables reflect calendar years, except for Australia, New Zealand and the United States, where the years concern the respective fiscal years. All data concerning 1999 should be considered provisional and subject to change. The asylum data for 1999 may be cross-referenced with Chapter IV.

Where possible, the data refer to the number of applicants or persons rather than applications or cases. Detailed information on the number of persons and cases is provided in the footnotes to the tables.

The asylum application statistics generally indicate "first" applications only and thus exclude "reopened" or appeal applications (Tables V.1 and V.2). Detail is provided in the footnotes.

Because asylum data are produced mainly for administrative purposes, it is possible that asylum-seekers are counted more than once. In case the application is subject to an administrative review or appeal decision, the "case" is counted twice: once at the first instance level and once at the appeal level. Double counting may also result when an asylum-seeker receives both a positive and negative decision during the same year. For instance, a significant number of Kosovars who had received a short-term residence permit on the basis of humanitarian considerations during the first part of 1999, subsequently received a negative decision during the second part of the year. In short, the number of decisions may be significantly higher than the number of initial asylum applications.

The opposite may be true as well, however. Thus, countries with a formal "pre-screening" procedure generally include in their decisions only those cases which were admitted to the formal asylum procedure. Data on "pre-screening" are, due to a lack of availability, generally not included in these tables. Countries without a formal "pre-screening" procedure often classify asylum applications which do not receive a substantive consideration under "Otherwise closed" (Tables V.11 and V.12). The number of cases rejected on non-substantive grounds ("Otherwise closed") is thus difficult to compare between countries with and those without a formal pre-screening phase.

Country practices to calculate the total number of asylum decisions differ greatly. For instance, some countries include applications closed on formal grounds in the total number of decisions, whereas other countries exclude them. Furthermore, in some countries, the granting of humanitarian or comparable status is considered a negative decision, whereas in other countries, these decisions are counted separately as being positive. To standardize the number for decisions taken, UNHCR has calculated the number of decisions by adding up all substantive decisions (Table V.3 to V.8) for each country. The total number of decisions provided here (Table V.9 and V.10) may thus differ from the total number of decisions reported by governments. The standardization of the total number of decisions is also important for the calculation of the recognition percentages (see below),

An important difference with the 1998 Statistical Overview is that the current Overview excludes asylum cases which are closed (rejected) on non-substantive grounds from the total number of decisions. Thus, closed cases no longer form part of the calculation of recognition percentages (Tables V.15-V.18). Judicial asylum decisions, independent from the administrative asylum process, are generally not included in these tables.

The asylum decisions presented in these tables are not limited to applications made during the year the decision was made, but may also include applications lodged in prior years. The annual "carry-over" of undecided or pending applications is reflected in Table V.13 and V.14. Unfortunately, few countries are able to provide data on this important indicator for the efficiency of asylum procedures.

Arrivals under the 1999 Humanitarian Evacuation Programme for Kosovar refugees are generally not included in the asylum tables. These arrivals are also not fully reflected in the resettlement tables (Table V.19-V.20). The chart below summarizes the major movements under the Humanitarian Evacuation Programme programme.

Notes

* This refers to cases which are closed (rejected) on the basis of non-substantive grounds, because the applicant has "disappeared", died, etc.

Cases closed on the basis of 'pre-screening' are thus not included.

If figures on otherwise closed cases are not separately reported, they are generally included in the rejections (Table V.9 - V.10).

See also the introductory remarks to this Chapter.

See Table V.9 for footnotes.

See Table V.10 for further footnotes.

In addition, the Executive Office of Immigration Review closed 26,058 cases in 1997, 25,166 cases in 1998 and 36,582 cases in 1999.
