Protecting Refugees

Most refugees have been living in Kazakhstan for years, or even decades. They speak the local language, and many have family ties with citizens. Without permanent residency status, however, they do not have access to most socio-economic rights, including naturalisation.

Kazakhstan is a State Party to both the 1951 Refugee Convention and its 1967 Protocol. Reaffirming its commitment to the Refugee Convention, at the 2019 Global Refugee Forum Kazakhstan pledged to provide ICAO-standard Machine-Readable Convention Travel Documents to refugees.

UNHCR works with the government to strengthen asylum procedures and establish an effective referral mechanism from border to responsible authorities, so that refugees and asylum-seekers can safely access territory and their rights as people forced to flee.

UNHCR advocates for improvements in national legislation to ensure that all refugees have access to the rights and services stipulated in these treaties, including education, healthcare, and local integration.

Addressing Statelessness

Without legal identity, stateless people often have difficulty accessing basic rights and services such as education, healthcare, employment and freedom of movement. Together with partners, UNHCR supports the government to identify and document people of undetermined nationality and to prevent statelessness from occurring.

Since the 2014 launch of the global #IBelong Campaign to End Statelessness, Kazakhstan has introduced Statelessness Determination Procedures, amended legislation to ensure all children are registered at birth and issued birth certificates – irrespective of their parents' legal status – and granted citizenship to nearly 9,000 stateless people.

UNHCR promotes further alignment of national citizenship and statelessness laws with international standards, and advocates for Kazakhstan to accede to the 1954 and 1961 Statelessness Conventions.

Working with Partners

Government partners in Kazakhstan include the Ministries of Foreign Affairs, Internal Affairs, Justice, Healthcare, Labour and Social Protection of Population, and Education and Science, as well as the Border Guards Service of the National Security Committee, Kazakhstan Commission on Human Rights, and the Office of the Commissioner on Human Rights.

UNHCR works in close partnership with civil society, including the Kazakhstan International Bureau for Human Rights and the Rule of Law, Kazakhstan Red Crescent Society, and the Legal Centre for Women's Initiatives "Sana Sezim". UNHCR also cooperates with academia and the private sector in Kazakhstan.

As a member of the UN Country Team and the UN Sustainable Development Cooperation Framework of Kazakhstan, UNHCR actively engages with UN and development partners, international financial institutions and other stakeholders to ensure refugees, asylum-seekers and stateless people are not left behind in Kazakhstan's achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).
