Global Trends Report

UNHCR's annual Global Trends Report which came out on 18 June ahead of World Refugee Day, shows that an unprecedented 79.5 million were displaced as of the end of 2019. UNHCR has not seen a higher total. The report shows that forced displacement is now affecting more than one per cent of humanity – 1 in every 97 people – and with fewer and fewer of those who flee being able to return home. In his statement Filippo Grandi, the UN High Commissioner for Refugees, called for greater solidarity with people forced to flee: "Whoever you are. No matter where you come from. Every one of us can make a difference. Every action truly counts".
