Moderated by Mr. Herve de Villeroche, Special Advisor on Development, UNHCR

In protracted crisis settings, working to reduce humanitarian needs while laying the foundation for long-term development is a complex and challenging undertaking that demands a multi-stakeholder approach focused on solutions. This side event will discuss the findings of the multi-year independent evaluation of UNHCR's engagement in humanitarian-development cooperation. It will shed light on some of the successful examples from UNHCR's work with its partners and stimulate discussions on how the coordination between humanitarian and development actors in forced displacement settings can be improved further.
