In a rapidly changing world, where tomorrow's jobs have yet to be defined, our professional environment is increasingly governed by artificial intelligence, blockchain and robotic process automation technology. Against this backdrop, UNHCR looks at the prospects of a future in which these new technologies play an empowering role in making the working day and professional sphere a more human and person-centric experience. Join us for a discussion to explore how organizations continue to adapt, learn from each other, and prepare for an increasingly unpredictable future, with a view to ensuring the right people are in the right place, at the right time.
